New Listings in the National Register of Historic Places

The Ebony Guest House at 712 and 714 Wilson Street in Florence was listed in the National Register on January 14, 2021. The tourist home is located at 712 Wilson Street and was operated by the local Holmes family, who lived in the adjacent property to the north at 714 Wilson Street. It is significant for its role as a Jim Crow-era tourist home for African Americans. Opened in 1950 and in operation until 1972, the Ebony Guest House exemplifies the sort of alternative spaces that African Americans created and maintained for their communities in a society defined by segregation. Knowledge of the Ebony Guest House circulated by word of mouth and its listing in the Negro Travelers' Green Book, the publication and widespread use of which testified to the deep social value of the services offered by the businesses listed on its pages. To view photographs and read the nomination click on this link for the Ebony Guest House.

Leevy's Funeral Home at 1831 Taylor Street in Columbia was listed in the National Register on January 14, 2021. Leevy's Funeral Home was built in 1951 and is significant for its association with African American community-building during segregation and with Isaac Samuel (I. S.) Leevy. Efforts to design and construct the building were led by Leevy's son, Isaac Kirkland Leevy. The two-story, Mid-century Modern building features a notable slate-stone façade on its southeast corner and has a high degree of historic integrity. The business's history is representative of the broader role black-owned funeral homes played for African Americans during segregation and provided vital services in caring for the dead with skill and respect. The property is also listed for its association with I. S. Leevy (1876-1968), a prominent local political activist and community leader. A founder of the Columbia NAACP and a prominent figure in state Republican Party politics, Leevy was one of the city's leading advocates for black political empowerment and educational equality in the early and mid-twentieth century. To view photographs and read the nomination click on this link to Leevy's Funeral Home.

The Citadel Shirt Corporation at 1215 Shop Road in Columbia was listed in the National Register on January 15, 2021. The Citadel Shirt Corporation building is a single-story brick building with a modified rectangular plan and barrel-vaulted ceilings originally constructed in 1950 with additions made c.1954 and between 1955 and 1959. The building is significant in the area of Industry for its association with apparel manufacturing, a subsector of South Carolina's historically important textile manufacturing industry. The Citadel Shirt Corporation building is also significant in the area of Military for its connection to Fort Jackson through its employment by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES). The building is the only extant resource in Columbia associated with AAFES' Carolina Area Support Center (CASC), one of only fifteen Area Support Centers in the nation. To view photographs and read the nomination click on this link for the Citadel Shirt Corporation.

The Charleston Naval Hospital at 3600 Rivers Avenue in North Charleston was listed in the National Register of Historic Places on January 25, 2021. The Charleston Naval Hospital is an eleven-story pre-cast concrete former Navy hospital designed in the Brutalist style with New Formalist elements. It is locally significant under Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an excellent example of Modernism in North Charleston. The building was designed by the noted South Carolina-based architectural firm of Lyles, Bissett, Carlisle and Wolff. The property contains a total of nine resources, including: the Charleston Naval Hospital, the L. Mendel Rivers Plaza, and a mechanical outbuilding (all contributing); the Naval Hospital Residential Building, the residential building's basketball and tennis courts, a storage shed, and two guardhouses (all noncontributing). To view photographs and read the nomination click on this link for the Charleston Naval Hospital.

In addition to these new listings, a boundary increase and additional documentation were approved for the Columbia Commercial Historic District on January 25, 2021.
